Class: 5A

Roy and his classmates went on a school picnic with their teacher yesterday. They brought a lot of food, drinks and toys there. They all felt very excited because this year they were P.5 so they could have a barbecue on the school picnic! They went to the Country Park by school bus. On the way to the Country Park, some people were enjoying the view, some people were playing 'Rock, Paper, Scissors' and some people were chatting with one another.

When Roy, his classmates and his teacher arrived at the Country Park, Roy and his classmates all cheered loudly and happily. They followed their teacher to go inside the park. Then the teacher said that they could do anything. Roy and his classmates said 'Hurray!'. After that, some people sat next to the barbecue stove and started to have a barbecue, some people sat on the bench to read books, some people played badminton and some people played hide-and-seek. They all felt very happy and relaxed.

Roy and Tony wanted to breathe some fresh air of nature so they asked the teacher and went to a trail that next to a stream. They looked at the beautiful view and breathed the fresh air happily and felt very relaxed. Suddenly, they saw a sick baby crocodile lying on the sand. They felt surprised and said, 'Why is there a baby crocodile?' They called their teacher quickly. When their teacher went to the trail, they said to the teacher, 'We think the baby crocodile is sick. We want to help it, what should we do to help it?' The teacher said, 'I think we should put it back into the stream.' Then, they pushed it into the stream hard. Finally, the baby crocodile returned to the stream happily.

Roy, Tony and the teacher returned to the park and went back school by school bus with other classmates. They all had a memorable day that day!
